Mrs. K's Message:

I have been busy reading many articles about supporting a STEAM education and how to build a partnership between school and home that supports our students in these areas. I have come across many tips and thought I would bring them to you in our weekly newsletter from time to time. Here are two ideas:

One - Encourage Questioning: Is your child always asking “why” and “how”? That’s a STEAM mindset. Embrace this curiosity. Try to take the time to explain the things that you understand, and when your child poses a question that you don’t have an answer to, look up the answer together. This models good research practices in the process.

Two - Seek out STEAM extracurriculars: Extracurricular activities, even for young students, don’t have to be limited to sports. There are many children who take part in performing arts clubs or lessons. Beyond that there are many STEAM clubs that we can help connect you with. Right here in our Ruhkala Community we have Early Engineers, Mad Science, and Intellibricks. Ukuleles will be up and running on Wednesday and more information will be coming out soon about a Robotics Club that is in the planning stages.

Science, technology, engineering, arts, and math (STEAM) education is becoming more and more important. These are necessary skills in today’s world. In general our children are being asked to apply their knowledge and skills. This application piece makes this a very exciting time to be a student, teacher, and a parent - supporting our children’s curiosity and learning.

Thank you for your partnership- Mrs. K

Site Council: We are currently accepting nominations for a vacant parent position on our Ruhkala Site Council. If you are interested in nominating an individual, please email Mrs. Kikosicki their name by Wednesday, October 5.

STEAM Moment:

Making mistakes is an important part of learning. Mistakes are proof that we are trying. In Ms. Storey’s class, mistakes are celebrated. The children get to put a marble in when they have learned from a mistake. When the jar is full of marbles the class will enjoy a reward.
